Read the updated fairy tale below. Find the twenty misspelled words and circle them. Then, on the numbered lines, write the correct spelling for each circled word.

Once there lived a king who wouldn't let his daughter marry. The queen was in complete accord. "We'll be candid, Rapunzel, dear," they told the princess. "There is no evadence we will ever find a suitor worthy of you."

"But I have fundementel objections to being single!" wailed the princess. "This is gastly! If you do not let me find a husband, I guaranty I will run away!"

After that dialouge, the king began to speceulate about the wisdom of leaving Rapunzel unguarded. He locked her in a magnificent tower deep in the forest. There she spent her days clamoring for vengence, silent only when fatig overcame her.

Meanwhile, following culturel norms, the prince of a nearby satelite state set off on a quest. Althou he was awed by the tower, he was confused by the sounds of fury coming from it. He prudently donned camaflauge gear and hid in the underbrush.

Soon there appeared—an oponent? No, it was only the king's asistant. "Rapunzel, Rapunzel!" the servant cried. "Let down your hair!" From a high window, the princess uncoiled her long braid. The servant tied a basket to the braid, and Rapunzel pulled up her supper.

"What luck that the servant's arrival should coinciede with mine!" thought the prince. As soon as the servant left, he emerged and called, "Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair!"

Rapunzel looked down to see a man dressed as a gooseberry bush. "Well," she thought, "I comend his creativity . . ." She uncoiled her braid, and the prince began to climb up.

"Yowch!" howled Rapunzel. "How much do you weigh?"

"Patience, sweet petunia! Soon you'll be mine!"

But Rapunzel reached for the scissors. "Why should I go bald just to gratify you? I'm a princess, not a climbing rope. Go find yourself another petunia. And lose some weight!"

Snip! The prince was history. Rapunzel made peace with her parents, inherited the kingdom, and lived happily ever after.
